COFFEE

Manual Brew

Please choose your beans and brewing method

Method

V60

Is a pour over method of coffee brewing, which involves pouring hot water through the coffee grounds. The water drains through the grounds (using a disposable filter) and drips slowly into your mug below it.

The V60 with very clear tasting notes, coffee a thin-to-medium perception of body and excellent distinction between flavor notes like fruitiness, cocoa and florals.

French Press

It's a full immersion brewing device with a metal mesh filter. This guarantees one thing in particular, a viscous brew with a fuller body and increased texture due to more oils remaining in the final brew and also fewer coffee particles.

French press coffee is known for its heavy body and robust taste.

Vietnamese Drip

It's similar to the pour over technique in that the apparatus sits on top of your mug and has a filter.
